Monika Dobska*

The Polish Economic Society—Poznań Branch

The Poznań Branch of the Polish Economic Society has pursued its mission for many years through academic, educational, and public outreach events that promote economic knowledge. The branch's activities focus on fostering collaboration between academia and business while creating a platform for discussion of the key challenges facing today's economy.

In recent years, the branch has organized and co-organized numerous academic conferences and seminars. These have included the conference "Building Poland's Economic Resilience to Security Challenges," which addressed issues related to economic security, geostrategy, and the country's economic resilience. Another significant event was the conference "New Challenges in Healthcare," which brought together experts in economics, medicine, law, and engineering to discuss the operation of healthcare systems in the face of contemporary crises.

The branch is also actively committed to supporting the development of the student academic community. One example was the inter-university seminar "Issues and Challenges in Contemporary Management," organized with the participation of members of the Polish Economic Society Student Research Club and students from various academic institutions. The seminar provided an opportunity to present research findings, exchange experiences, and strengthen cooperation between universities. The Poznań Branch also supports valuable academic initiatives through its patronage, including the InterLOG Interdisciplinary Scientific Conference, dedicated to logistics, production, and economics.

Publishing remains another important pillar of the branch's work. The branch publishes Economic Review (Przegląd Ekonomiczny), an academic journal that provides a forum for presenting research in economics, finance, and management sciences. Its publishing portfolio is further complemented by scholarly monographs, edited volumes, and other academic publications devoted to economic and management issues, contributing to the dissemination of knowledge and the advancement of research.

* Prof. Monika Dobska—President of the Poznań Branch of the Polish Economic Society.